Unlock Our July's Best-Kept Secrets!

Dear Colleague,

We trust this month kicks off an uplifting healthy and prosperous financial year.

The medical treatments for many autoimmune diseases can have some significant side effects and rarely cure. The natural therapist is Sherlock Holmes, looking at every aspect of the case. Looking to find the triggers, allergins, toxins, deficiencies, emotions, internal weaknesses, etc. The gut gets more focus today but hard for the Natural Therapist to get a real good look at what lurks there. There are not a lot of doctors who order CDSAs to look at microbiology. The ones that may find Klebsiella (known to cause ankylosing spondylitis), and Blasto (cause bloating, diarrhea and weight loss) are some of the biggest trouble makers.

Common Streptococcus Species: Agalactiae, Lactis, and Mitis

Strep can act as a commensal, cause minor throat and sinus infections, or become a chronic infection with serious consequences. It produces proteases like Hyaluronidase, which can damage red blood cells and lead to anemia. Often lying dormant for years in the bowel or sinuses, a stressor can trigger its activity. While the internet provides information, not all of it addresses strep's contribution to autoimmune conditions during the chronic stages. Doctors treating it with specific antibiotics may not fully understand its role in autoimmune diseases, but they often observe markers of inflammation, including CRP, and find that various physical symptoms improve once the chronic infection is addressed.

Gut Microbiome, pH, and Systemic Health: Insights and Restoration

My take on it is that these bugsies in the colon will particularly thrive in a low pH in the stool. When loads of food hit the intestines poorly digested and there is maybe a lack of HCL to trigger pancreatin so the food waste continues to ferment and when the pH is lower than 6.5 the good bugs cannot survive very well. The body is also absorbing more putrafactive acid toxins back into the circulation leading to loss of zeta potential and greater fatigue. Without the good bugs, the bad bugs continue to thrive so systemic conditions often worsen.

Many people have axle grease instead of hydraulic fluid (metaphor) to do the heavy lifting so the rebuilding requires the pH lifted in the colon and then your best protocols for restoration. I gained some insights twenty years ago when I sat in on a lecture with a doctor from WA whose wife had been bedridden for 15 years with CFS sometime after her second child was born. In searching for answers he found Chlamydia in the stool with a pH of 4. He found a special probiotic that was made in Malaysia from tropical fruits and berries so the flora were very hardy in a low pH and that helped his wife progressively get well. Most probiotics today have a narrower window with pH. After learning about this I set out to produce a gut broom adsorber that would also raise the colon pH and ToxElim was born. Principly soluble diatomaceous earth and MSM (Methyl Sulfonyl Methane).

New compounding ingredients from a competitor

A competitor has just released three compounding ingredients. Beware, they are not what they say they are. NMN (mostly D Ribose), DIM (mostly Calcium D Glucarate) and Benfotiamine (mostly Acetyl Carnitine) and these active doses are very low. You can buy all these compounding ingredients and excipients from BioActiv Compounding (ours are 100% what they say they are) and combine them for your patients and either save them heaps, or maybe make a little extra cash for your efforts. This is the way to go as the Retailers cannot do this.

BioActiv Lipo C Returns to OHS Order Platform

BioActiv Lipo C is Australia's First Liposomal C Liquid with Sustained Antioxidant Activity. Osborne Health Supplies temporarily suspended sales of Lipo C due to a batch issue where bottles were fizzing.
